

Arwen (Yellow 2024). 6.2 lb, $18/lb, 6.5" staple (unstretched), $100 total (not including shipping) after 10% discount in case of fragile tips.

Arwen was named after an elf because her older sister, Elfin, was the teeny (but graceful) one of triplets. Arwen's mother was one of my very favorite ewes until I retired her last year from breeding. Arwen's fleece tested at a 32.1 micron count (quite low for a longwool breed). On the flip side, Arwen's fleece has a bit more VM (mostly along the back) than average for our lamb fleeces, though I would still rate the VM as "low". Arwen's fleece has a 6.5" staple and weighs 6.2 pounds skirted.

Above: overview of Arwen's fleece, from head towards rear quarters.

Above: view of front quarter of Arwen's fleece.

(Continued on next page)

Above: view of middle of Arwen's fleece

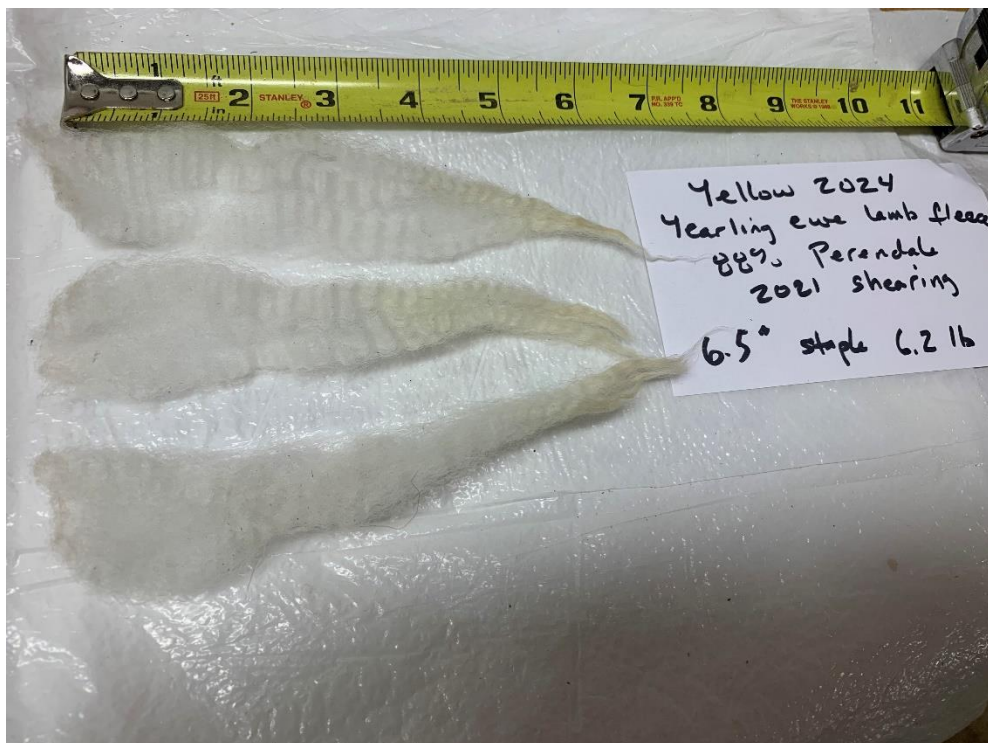

Above: view of rear quarter of Arwen's fleece
(Continued on next page)

Above: three locks of Arwen's fleece, taken at random from (top to bottom) front, middle, and rear quarters. All locks tested sound.

Same three locks after brief washing in tepid water with goat's milk soap.
(Continued on next page)

View of Arwen's fleece, as bagged.